Communication is part of everything we do and with so much of our world going digital, our Communications class will focus on exactly that. Students will learn the art of introducing yourself via email, knowing your audience, deciphering social media avenues and privacy/safety features. This interactive class will have students using and building their communication, research and relational skills. Erin Vlasak and Amy Colvin are offering this class in-person at our Smithtown location and via Zoom. Students will also be focusing on tech communication etiquette, cybersecurity, and domain names along with practicing their research and presentation skills in order to best share information.
